THE trouble which recently arose with reference to the segregation of Japanese school children in San Francisco, is typical of a difficulty which is being felt in many different directions at the present time. The United States Government is willing to treat Japanese as in every way upon a footing with persons of European nationalityand if the matter rested entirely with the central Government, no question whatever would have arisen. Unfortunately, however, the State of California, which is that immediately concerned, takes a different view of the subject-and thus a delicate and complicated state of affairs has arison. The Spectator in noticing the subject. observes that "the whole incident is significant lesson of the faults of the American Constitution. When states can assert themselves against the nation in matter in which the gravest issues of foreign policy are involved, some reform in the direction of strengthening the National Government seems to be urgently needed". Its contents are of more general interest than those of some earlier numbers and, while the claims of the sinologue and the student are by no means neglected, there is much that will be found entertaining by the average reader. The concluding article on "The Chinese Gardens of Unnatural History," with its quaint pictures of human freaks, is given the place of honour. Mr. John Macgowan, in his third study of the "Lights and Shadows of Chinese Life," treats of "River Life in China," always a fascinating subject; Dr. Franklin Ohlinger carries on his " studies in Chinese Dreamlore;" the novel "Chao Chuin," which is as full of human interest as any story of medicaval Europe, reaches a point of crisis; and the Rev. G. H. Bondfield concludes the account of his recent visit to Mongolia. There are more "Gems of China Poetry," with translations by "The Chinese Hermit" and some of them reveal a p ofty fancy daintily expressed. "The Trial as a magistrate, can be matched in Chinese Lore. The lev. C. Bone writes of the horrors of Chinese Prisons, and the number closes with a metrical translation by O. D. Wannamaker of a hundred-year-old Chinese poem, whose author was inspired by "seeing a battle of ants." The number is so strong both in subject matter and in production that the greater regret will be felt at a prefatory note which announces that only one more will appear.

THE FAMINE IN CHINKIANG.

A Chinkiang telegram to the N.C. Daily News, dated January 8th, says: From comprehensive survey of the situation in the hammer at full cock. He put his finger on the camps, and after consultation with leading men, officials, civilians and missionaries, I estimate that there are 17,000 refugees in the vicinity of this town. Of these 5,000 show evidence of the hammer, causing the cirtridge to be acute distress; while the rest are in a normal condition physically, but are extremely filthy and covered with vermin. There are 5.000 able bodied men, at a minimum computation among them. The huts are scattered about pell mell; the camps are unorganized and in a most insanitary condition. Two and a half tons of rice are being cooked daily and being officials. The Grand Canal, south of the river, is completely tilted up in places and impassable for traffic. Bunding work alone would give employment to the whole number of male adults. The reason given by the officials for not instituting relief works is that they have no funds; this, however. is puerile as the initial expenditure would be almost nil

Meanwhile the population is becoming charitable efforts pauperized. Local necessarily limited and lack cohesion and practice. There is undoubtedly every prospect of a grave disaster ahead in the form of an epidemic in this neighbourhood, and it would seem that the only way to obviate this lies in making sanitary camps, and in employing all able-bodied men and women on some work of permanent character.

DISSOLUTION OF THE REICHSTAG

SOUTH-WEST AFRICAN VOTE REJECTED

Very interesting is the following from the Times correspondent at Berlin, Dec. 13th :-With sensational suddenness for the majority of the public but hardly, as the evidence shows, for the Government, the Reichstag was dissolved at 5 30 this afternoon by a decree which the Emperor had signed this morning at Buckeburg, and which the Imperial Chancellor read to the House. The present Reichstag, which was elected in June, 1903, has, therefore, comgleted barely three and a half years out of a possible legislative period of five years.

The point on which the Emperor, his responsible adviser, the Imperial Chancellor, Prince lillow, and the Federated Governments as represented in the Federal Council have chosen to appeal to the country is the demand of majority of the Reichstag, consisting of the Clerical Centre, with its auxillaries the Peles and the Hanoverian Guelphs, for a reduction of the forces employed in South West Africa to 2,500 men in the course of the next financial year (April 1st, 1907, to March 31st, 1908). The support of the whole of the Social Democrats secured an anti-Government majority of five on one division and of ten upon a second. The light took place over the financial demand of the Government for South-West African supplementary estimates for the current year to the amount of 29,229,000 marks principle of voting what was required for the (£1,461,000) in order to defray this year's further | conduct of the war in South Africa, and that expenditure beyond the estimates for the they therefore considered it impracticable, in military operations. As stated in my despatch | view of eventualities, to insist upon the r ducthe day before yesterday, the Government lost | tion of the troops to a fixed minimum within a the preliminary battle in the Budget Com- given time The Radical resolution (Herr mittee. In the committee, it is true, the holass) nevertheless took account of "the House when it met to-day that the committee quence of this situation two fresh proposals were this afternoon submitted the Reichstag. The first was that the Chrical Centre (Count Hompesch), which (£1,014,4 0) on the condition that in addition to the return home of 4,400 more men preparations should be made by March 31st, at latest for reducing the total strength of the troops in the colony to the number of 2,500 men. The second proposal, which was introduced as a basis of compromise by the Radical Left (Herr Ablass), was that the amount demanded by the Government should be voted on the assumption that 4,000 more men should be sent home in the course of the present financial year ending on March 31st, 1907, and that within the same peri d "preparations should be made progressive pacification of the colony." Prince Billow at once rose to address the House apon the situation. From the unusual firmners of his tone and manner it speedily became evident that the Government contemplated the possibility of a crisis. He began by assuring the House that the financial there were nineteen. He said these were the Bandmann Opera Company's money and he had | proposals before them had been most carefully prepared and only asked for what was Cross examined -Accused made no secret to it dispensable. The number of troops demanded was only what was absolutely required for the suppression of the insurrection and the pacification of the colony. our troops would not be equal to a movement of that character. We should then be face to face with the question whether we should again reconquer our colonies at the cost of disproportionate sacrifices or should be prepared o lose them for ever. " Not only the military authorities, but also all the experts, are agreed that this is a case of one final effort to restore permanent tranquillity and security to our colonies. Were we to shrink from this final secrifice, we should, in my opinion, incur the guilt of a grave neglect of duty, a national sin. ('Hear, hear' on the Right.) I cannot believe that this House will adopt a decision of that nature, which would be equally regrettable from the financial, the military, the political, and the national point of view. culated to conciliate the recalcitrant Centre. Herr Dernburg likewise made a statement with regard to the main question. Running Eczema From Birth — Head Raw—Face Sickening Sight—It Wore Him to a Shadow Tried Remedies and Two Doctors - People Said, "How Can You Wish Him to Live?"

MARVELOUS CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My husband and I thought you would like to know what the Cuticura Remedies have done for our baby boy. He had running eczema from birth. It developed itself after the first mouth. The poor little fellow's head was quite raw, his face was a sickening sight and the dreadful humour would soak his pillow through in a single night. It wore him to a shadow. People who saw him said, 'How can you wish him to live?' Two doctors saw him; one recommended Cuticura Remediés, but could do little else for him, for it was so obstinate. We tried several remedies, in fact everything we could think of and wasteld of. At last we got Cuticura Ointment, and together with the Cuticura Soap the result was marvelous, for I have not finished one box and the skin is now perfectly clear. It has all dried up and his hair is growing wonderfully. and instead of sleepless nights he has the proper sound sleep. Mrs. C. Baker, 28 Victoria Road, Blandford, Dorset, Mar. 12, 1906."

DISSOLUTION OF THE BEICHSTAG.

(Continued from page 3.) railway were built, which would have the effect of releasing 1,000 more men. The Government could not undertake to be responsible for the life and property of the farmers and for the security of the colony with a force of 2,500 men. In fact, as they were already sending home 4,000 men, there was no reason to introduce into the vote a provision that these men should be sent back. But they were willing -to-express their agreement with the Radical propresal of Herr Ablass in so far as their own efforts were in the same direction. That proposal need not be interpreted as an interfer ence with the supreme command of the military forces, since the Government considered that, in case of necessity, a larger humber of troops would, as a matter of course, by retained in the colony (" Hear, hear," from the Radicals, and Socialist interruptions \-The Government could not consent to any reduction of the money vote, which had been determined by the necessities of the case. At present the annual cost of each man was 10,000 marks  $(£50^{\circ})$ ; when the railway was opened it would be 5.848 marks (£292) at present prices, but when normal prices were restored it would be under 3,000 marks (£150). After a stormy episode, caused by the declarations of a Pole, who referred to the school strike in Prussian Polandan I was called to or ler, the Centre leader, Dr. Spahn, amid breathless intherest, made a statement on behalf of his party. He denied that their proposal really meant a refusal of "one man or one groachen," but they wanted to consider the whole sum by which the estimates had been exceeded in a lump when the credit bill was submitted, and not to disguise the financial situation by voting at pres nt 29 million marks (£1,450,900) They only contemplated for the present financial year a withdrawal of troops to which the Government itself agreed, and their proposals for the next financial year were based upon the actual situation, which made it appear absurd that so ma y troops should be opposed to the 3.0 Hottentots still in the field. Their proposal regarding the withdrawal of troops for the financial year 1907, if adopted, would only take effect after eight or nine months. It did not interfere with the supreme command, because if a fresh insurrection required the presence of more troops his party would certainly be prepared to vote fresh supplie. (Laughter on the Right.) An appeal had been made to the national honour. but how could the national honour suffer whee, after next April, there were still to be 8,000German soldiers in the field against 300 Hottentots? Their colonial expenditure was already. so great that they must think twice about any fresh expenditure, and moreover, fresh taxes were already being announced. Let others, if they liked, take the responsibility for voting fresh sums. The Centre would not upbraid them, but it would not share in that responsible lity. In conclusion, he protested once for all against the Colonial Director's insinuations. about a "rival Government" (Neb nyc derung) attempted by the Centre and against the charge of hushing up scandals. (Loud cheers in the Lientenant Colonel Quade, on behalf of the military authorities, said that the number of Hottentots in the field varied. It had been loss than 300, but was now between 500 and 600 The German losses and the attacks on convoys thowed the continuance and the danger of the guerilla warfare. The country must Metal and Hardware thoroughly puc field, and to yield one step at the present juncture would mean the loss of the campaign and of the colony. For every man who could be brought into contact with the enemy the presence of four men in the theatr' 35 & 37; Hing Loong Street of war was required. The military authorities refused to take responsibility for the proposed

> After some further speeches, Prince Bullow again addressed the House. "The question is," he said. "whether we will imperit our military honour (loud cheers on the Right), our position in the world, our prestige in the world, in order to save a comparatively insignificant sum at the end of a campaign which has cost us hundreds of millions. (Cheers on the Right.) Are we in a moment of discouragement to imperil the results of gallant exertions maintained for years? Are the heavy sacrifices in blood and treasure which we have made for our colonies to prove blessing to the colonies and to the father land, or shall they have been made in vain? The Government cannot allow parties and the Parliament to dictate to it how many troops it requires for warlike operations. (Loud interruntions.) Where should we land if it became the custom to make dependent upon the decisions of party or upon party considerations, those military measures in time of war upon the proper execution of which depend the life and bealth of our troops in the field, the honour of our arms and, it may be; the whole future of our country? (Lond cheers among the Liberals and on the Right.) Out there our soldiers, and they are Germans! They have fought, they have suffered, they are on the point of crushing the last resistance of the enemy. Are they to come back because a pusilla nimous Government, in fear of the Parliment, or because of party considerations, leaves their heroism in the lur h before the enemy? (Loud cheers.) Think of the colonial wars which other nations—the English, the French and the Dutch-have waged without one twitch. Is the German nation to show itself pettier than the other nations? That is the question to which the Federated Governments want a fair and square answer. We may regret that the insurrection has cost such a loss of life and such expenditure of treasure, we may regret it; but we cannot retreat. We must go on to the end. (Cheers.) "Gentlemen, the silly saying has been attributed to me, 'Above all, no domestic orisis!' (Laughter.) I caused it to be denied, but it is always cropping up again. I never said anything of the kind

"There are situations in which to shun a crisis would be to display lack of courage and of the sense of duty. If you want the crisis you can have it now. (Loud and long-continued cheering among the Liberals and Radicals and on the Right; interruptions in the Centre and among the socialists.) Parties can accept or reject votes, for they have no responsibility." (Loud protests in the Centre and on the Left) But the Government must not yield to the desires and interests of particular parties when their highest concern, the national honour, is in question. (Cheers.) A few minutes ago the report was conveyed to me that I had said was not pushing but was being pushed, that was only carrying out instructions from the highest quarter. That is an impudent falsehood. No one is pressing me, no one is pushing me. I need no directions to make me recognize the national necessities which are now at stake." The Chaucellor concluded with a renewed appeal to the House, which then divided on the two proposals before it, with the result above stated.

About eighty years ago Dr. Robert Brown discovered that microscopic particles—such as powdered indigo, carmine, gamboge, etc.,—keep | in rapid movement when suspended in water The peculiar oscillations may continue for years, and seem to be the nearest approach to perpetual motion yet observed. It lately occurred to Drs. Carl Heriog and E. F. Northrup to test the influence of an electric current apon this Brownian movement. When the suspending liquid was placed between two electrodes, the particles took a very decided course across the field, some being attracted to one electrode and some to the other. Each particle had its characteristic direction, and in some mixtures the particles of material travelled with the current and those of the other against it. The motion was so positive that Dr. Northrup has mide it the basis of a successful electrical measuring instrument for special purposes.

Everybody knows that plants grow largest in rich soil, but it is not so well understood that the largest roots may be found in very poor soil. This has been made a subject of late experiments by a French botanist. Lots of colsa seeds were planted respectively in washed sand in soil exhausted by many crops, and in good soil; and after seven weeks, with like watering the roots of the first lot had grown 14 to 16 inches, of the second lot 10 to 12 inches, and of the third lot only 6 inches. In the poorest soils the roofs must extend furthest to Delicate speed-regulating apparatus is required when a dynamo is geared direct to.a windmill. In a new system, the windmill pumps water into a hydraulic accumulator, and water from this-kept by automatic valves at a pressure of 75 pounds per square inch-drives the dynamo. A storage battery saves the surplus power in the usual way.

The novel and jugenious anemometer of R. Goldschmidt, a Belgian electrician, depends upon variation in electrical resistance due to the cooling by the wind of an electically heated platinum wire. To compensate for the changing i uperature of the air itself two similar wire re used, and these form arms of a kind of Wh Istone bringe, which is so adjusted that when the two wires are of equal resistance the galvanometer is at zero. After this adjustment, the cooling of the exposed wire-the other being protected-varies with the wind. The galvanometer - which may be at considerable distance away-is correspondingly deflected, and gives a direct reading of the wind's velocity, the indications having been neourately calibrated by driving one of the instruments on a rotating stand through calm air at a series of known speeds. With a recording galvanometer and an electrical weather-cork-the latter acting through changes of contact on a circular slide wirepermanent record can be kept of both the velocity and the direction of the wind.

A little apparatus of great utility is the Unilans' telescope lately produced by London opticions. It is simply a couver lens mounted in a metal ring having a projecting screw at one side, the lens being 21 inches in diameter and having a focal length of 6 feet. The instrument serves as a very good field glass, In use, it can be held in the hand at arms length or screwed to the end of a stick, and at maximum efficiency-about 6 feet from the eve-it magnifies four diameters. It is especially recommended for observing birds and plants. It is not intended as an astronomical telescope, but shows 8 stars in the Pleiades where the unaided eye usually sees 6.

Working with X-rays is liable to cause dermatitis, and the President of the British Electro-Therapoutic Society has suffered for two years from 40 or 50 warts on each hind. The pain is constant and severe. On the other hand. The unfamilar living world of the little, --with its activities, domestic relations and tragedies, is brought into better view by the bioscope, or long-focus microscope, of M. Da Gasparis, of the University of Naples. To be considerably magnified under the ordinary microscope, insects must be brought within a fraction of an inch of the lens, and with the frightful observing apparatus so near their movements must be far from normal. The new instrument is very simple. It consists essentially of a tube containing a system of achromatic objectives and a wide-field eyepiece, with various accessories, such as a camera lucida to aid in drawing. Objects at a distance of about 20 inches are magnified more than twelve diameters. Ants, spiders and many other insects can be watched. undisturbed; aquatic animals can be studied through the glass of an aquarium or in their natural home, and the habits, emotions, struggles, living and death of these creatures can be placed before us in an environment of strange multi-colored plants. The observations, we are told, are full of surprises. Materials submitted to high temperatures or electric charges may be viewed, and the physician gains a means of peering into cavities. like the larynx, cars, etc.

A very sensitive direct-reading level, called the "Shaftometer," has been brought out by a Halifax company for Thing up shafting, machinery, etc. It has a rigid guu-matal base 16 inches long, a glass tube 12 inches long, and brass scale runs the entire length of the tube on each side, each graduation of about oneeighth of an inch corresponding to a difference in level of one thousandth of an inch per foot, A table shows at a glance the thickness of packing required to bring a given length of shafting up to level.
